BLACK COTTON STAR

Philadelphia, 1776: George Washington asks Betsy Ross to design the first flag of the future United States of America. Her housemaid, Angela Brown, adds to it a secret tribute to the black community: a black cotton star that she slips under one of the white ones. Dover, 1944: A soldier named Lincoln receives a letter from his sister back home that reveals Angela Brown's memoirs, and wonders if the star that she mentions truly exists. His superiors seem to think so. In light of this revelation, Lincoln and two African American soldiers set out on a dangerous mission, ranging from liberated Paris to the snow-covered Ardennes, seeking answers-and the ultimate prize. Black Cotton Star is a magnificent war drama, unfolding a fictional tale of struggle, resilience, and sacrifice with themes that resonate deeply in divided modern-day America

OBITS

Michael Anderson studied journalism at the University of Rhode Island. Following a string of odd jobs after graduation, he is offered a job at a webzine, Neon Circus, based on a joke obituary he wrote for an actor who died of a drug overdose. The editor of Neon Circus, Jeroma Whitfield, gives him the obituaries column. After Whitfield denies him a raise, Michael writes her obituary as a way to vent his frustration. A colleague later calls him at home to tell him that Whitfield is dead. He tries to rationalize it as a coincidence, but when he writes another obituary for a living person, it becomes clear that he actually has some sort of power. The power becomes like an addiction. With each use, Michael feels a stronger compulsion to use it again. Eventually, he finds that he can kill not just specific individuals, but simultaneously anyone who shares the same name. He leaves Neon Circus, moves to Wyoming, and takes a job painting houses. He stops using computers for the most part, but he keeps a tablet to read Neon Circus occasionally. He remembers that one of his professors taught him that the end of a story is only the end „only for now.“

QEWD

An app helping people find content they want to watch.

Finding something to watch has become a pain. Despite Apple TV, Roku, smart TV's, and streaming search engines, the amount of time it takes to find something to watch continues to increase. Today, people spend 50 mins a day - or 2.7 years of their life - trying to find movies, TV series, and short form videos to watch. QEWD, an alternative to current TV OS', solves this problem by simplifying the process and shortening the time it takes to find, discover, and watch something great.

2024

UNIQUE CONCEPT:

The game combines real film footage with 3D models of real environment and actors for the most authentic Jan Zizka movie experience

SEAMLESS MOVIE-TO-GAME TRANSITIONS:

Immersion, story-telling, emotional attachment, and the ability to relive particular scenes are the greatest advantages of today's video games. Many competitor games try to improve on these aspects by pushing the boundaries of graphics to mimic movie scenes. They use motion-captured animations, hi-detailed 3D models, facial animations, etc.

Film footage and scenes done by real actors are the best option. Thanks to this, Medieval the game will offer the best experience based on seamless movie-to-game scenes, something that has never been seen before.

The quality of the characters will build on modern games like Call of Duty, Death Stranding, Cyberpunk, etc. Here's an example of Sir. Michael Caine.

DEVELOPER:

The studio is a licensed developer for Sony PlayStation, Microsoft Xbox, and Nintendo Switch, and has developed over 40 games in its history.

Reality vs 3D game model in detail

The concept of making a video game based on feature film with real actors is unique. There was only one similar game in the last decade: Quantum Break. The story of Medieval game takes place in similar historical settings as the award-winning and commercially successful Kingdom Come: Deliverance.
